

The Midwest Earthquake Vision 4-13-25 @ 7:05 AM

I'm seeing land. The ground; it's cracking open and out of it appears to be fissures of steam or smoke. It's hot. The steam or fissures are hot. What am I seeing, Jesus Christ? It's like the land is beginning to crack even further. It looks like reddish-brown soil, not sand, yet I sense this is not a city or populated area. Or, if it is, it's not with great numbers of people. I see what appears to be a red-brown type rock mountain. A mesa; I hear the word "mesa". In the far distance I see more of these types of mountains, but because they're far away they have a purplish look to them. The ground is cracking open and not in a straight line. It's more like a very uneven line that has a zigzag to it at times occasionally. The same steam, or fissures, are coming out like boiling water that comes bursting forth out of a tea kettle of boiling water.

It's an earthquake, but what's causing it I cannot see. The ground is splitting and the dirt, the top part, is now crumbling and falling into the large crack forming in the earth. I now notice there has been a low, rumbling noise that's gotten louder. It's as if the earth is crying out in pain. I see to my right, with the red-brown mountain on my left, I see a cactus and small bits and pieces of green and what looks like dried grass in places. "Is this in the United States, Jesus Christ, or somewhere else?" "It is. Judgment's hand moves, It moves, Daughter, it moves." "What's causing the earthquake? And where is it, Jesus Christ my Love?" "It is in the Midwest, Daughter, and the cause of it is sin...unrepented sin." The cactus has an orange flower, and the Mesa on my left is not a bright red, but a brownish-red. "Jesus Christ, my Love, when is this to happen?" "Soon, Daughter, soon." "Am I to share this? I ask You in Your Great Name." "Yes, Daughter, please do. Warn My people that this is to come."
